

Color curator Joa Studholme from Farrow & Ball has just shared her predictions for 2022.

The paint manufacturers say that, we'll be veering towards brighter colours that herald a return to normality, familiar colours in clever combinations, shades that are anchored in comfortability and simplicity.

Joa believes that décor is moving forward, but also 'drawing inspiration from the modest character of the world of folk and craft,' through tones that evoke a simple and modest life.

Take a look at how you can incorporate these colours into your home using Ulster carpet.

Ulster Velvet
Dovecote W2613

School House White No.291

Pared back, timeless and familiar without the cool undertones of the more contemporary neutral groups, this soft off white is reminiscent of the colour used in old school houses.

Breakfast Room Green No. 81

The most cheerful of all our greens, remaining lively in both bright sunlight or softer candlelight.

Stone Blue No. 86

Stone Blue's lively and saturated colour can be used alongside warmer tones such as Pelt to create an inviting vintage look, or the cooler Mole's Breath for a cleaner, more contemporary feel.

Incarnadine No.248

Unashamedly classic and glamorous. It can be used to sumptuous effect in halls when offset with Tanner's Brown on woodwork, or feel more edgy and graphic when paired with a bright white.

Babouche No.223

It has a cheerful brightness that will intensify when used in large areas, but it is always dignified and never garish.

Ulster Velvet Fauna
W2607

York Wilton
Cotswold Y1056

Watercolours Mineral
Savannah 15/20089

Watercolours Mineral
Azores 32/20089